$100 TAX SHIELDS THOSE WHO MAKE WHISKEY OF DRUGS

For That Sum Any Bar Owner Can Become a Rectifier and Push Out Home-Made "Booze" Without Interference.

Less than seven hundred of the eight thousand saloon men and liquor dealers in Greater New York handle "whiskey that is fit to drink."

This startling fact was brought to light to-day by Evening World reporters through interviews with agents of the United States Internal Revenue service and legitimate handlers, who were strong in commending this newsgaper's expose of the drug fraud perpetrated on the drinking

It was also revealed that by paying an annual license of $100 to the Government any bar owner may become a rectifier and palm off as a twelve-year-old liquid a brand of "rye" at 15 cents a drink that can be manufactured for less than 40 cents a gallon.

The evil has grown twenty-fold since the saloon license was raised from $500 to $1,200 recently. Although it is the daily of the revenue agents to collect the $100 rectifier's tax, it does not devolve upon them to investigate the methods of the so-called 'retail rectifiers." This is a matter which rests with the officials of the Agricultural Department, and, as this branch of the Government does not have special agents.

It seems, though, New York had little or no representation in the House when the Pure Food bill was pased. Naturally there was no lobbying in favor of a bar on the illicit Manhattan traffic, and it is most probable that New Yorkers will continue to pay for good whiskey and drink the worst concoction of drugs.

One revenue official said it would do no good to bring the matter up in a strong light before the House.

"Why," he declared, "the temperance societies would break in and demand even worse liquors. Whenever a meansure of this sort is introduced there is regulated.
